

NOVEMBER in the Gardens

RIGHT NOW'S THE TIME!

- Despite the cold and wind, many Japanese Maples managed to hang on to their beautiful yellow and orange leaves through the end of October. This month will see deciduous trees shed their remaining colorful fall leaves.
- The white bark of the alders surrounding the Buxton Bird Marsh pond stand out in stark contrast to the dark water.
- This time of year is great to admire all the different shades of color that cover the ground as well as the structure of all the trees and shrubs throughout the gardens.
- Moss is coming to life with the arrival of rain. The Moss Garden enters it's prime in the colder months. Also, don't forget to look up and notice the vibrant green mosses dripping from branches.
- Toad Lilies behind the Residence and in the Japanese Garden are still blooming.
- Persian Ironwoods in the Birch Garden and at Mid Pond are showcasing amazing fall color.
- Migratory American wigeons are making an appearance at the Reserve.

SEASONAL INTEREST...

Witch Alder | Gatehouse
Sweetgum | Gatehouse
Niko Maple | Gatehouse

Persian Ironwood | Mid Pond & Glen
Nerine | Mid Pond
Copper Beach | Residence

Mahonia | Residence
Burning Bush | Japanese Garden
Mushroom | Throughout

Persian Ironwood

Sweetgum

Nerine

Mushroom

Oak Leaves on Moss